Maybe, but that doesn't really matter. Trump gave people the catharsis they needed to not resort to violence. The sad thing is that the double standard is very real. It's not so much about racism as it is of right wing radicalization against democrats. The mistrust is more violent than leftwing mistrust of the right. Shelter in place happening during a Trump presidency gave the violent anti-government types a feeling of representation. Especially consider the murder of Epstein; if a democrat had been in power, what do you think would have happened. The violent and armed right wing has the country hostage. Sure, radical left can riot and ruin democrat cities when they're feeling a lack of representation, but right wing violence is more direct. People die.

To pacify the right, letting someone they think is one of them be in power helps them maintain a trust in government. One or two terms, a Trump presidency saved the American elite from unnecessary violence.

I mean you can sell your dumb propaganda here if you like but you just look stupid doing it. And if you think the government can stop a virus you are even more retarded anyways. PS Obama did nothing to stop the spread of Swine Flu. Nothing at all. Which is actually what Trump should have done.

You're being reductionist as a method of deflecting blame. As Mitt Romeny put it, America has 25% of the world's cases of COVID-19, and only 2% of the world's population. We are also the wealthiest nation in the world, have the greatest technology in the world and rely less on public transit than other countries. If we had anyone except a complete fucking retard calling it "kung flu" and saying it's a cold in charge, we could have saved hundreds of thousands of people -- if not more. I'm worried for the fall. No one worried about the early days of the pandemic as much as they did fall.

As the sun sets earlier and earlier each night, perhaps the future of this country will get more and more dim as well. Orange man is actually bad and dumb, and not playing 4D chess, is the hardest red pill for this board to take.

You never heard anybody going Chicken Little about any of that, but they were tragedies all the same. This is how Covid would be reported. He's as good as they say he is. He could have addressed that there was a problem in the first place, and informed people working within nursing homes for instance that this virus disproportionately affects older people. Actually he did worse than nothing. He ignored the issue with the virus entirely out of fears that the economy might falter. His entire identity as a president is taking credit for Obama's economic growth after the financial collapse.

Who was in charge of the fed during that? Alan Greenspan. Who appointed him? Ronald Reagan. What was his campaign slogan in 1980? "Make America Great Again." What was Trump's campaign slogan?

it was your precious CDC that told people not to wear masks and don't forget the WHO was knowingly feeding us false information about transmission and he took action to make sure they lost funding

it wasn't until march 16 that governor cuomo and bill deblasio even acknowledged the virus was a problem, as they defied trumps order to shut down then trump converted the javits center into a covid ward with 3000 beds, re-outfitted 2 naval vessils to be covid compliant and sent them to NY, along with 17,000 ventilators

cuomo opted not to use any of it and instead sent covid patients into nursing homes as did the governors of california and new jersey

>[H1N1] is purely a fortuity that this isn't one of the great mass casualty events in American history. It had nothing to do with us doing anything right. It just had to do with luck. If anyone thinks that this can't happen again, they don't have to go back to 1918, they just have to go back to 2009, 2010 and imagine a virus with a different lethality, and you can just do the math on that.
- Ron Klain, Chief of Staff to Vice President Joe Biden in 2009.

H1N1 infected 60 million Americans. If it had the same lethality of COVID-19, it would have killed two million Americans. President Obama failed to replenish the pandemic stock after the H1N1 pandemic which is why America was underprepared for COVID-19, btw.

Something he said once? Which at the time all the media, the Democrats, Fauci and Biden were saying, and was the consensus on the issue at the time?

I'm more interested in what policy changes you would make. I can list one; Trump should have invested in testing and ventilators at the same time as he banned travel to China, so there wouldn't have been that one week of shortages. Keep in mind that by early March, America more or less had enough ventilators and tests, but Biden was still saying the China travel ban was xenophobic, so it's not like Biden would have done a better job.

In retrospect, you have a point, but the President is a busy man who has to deal with hundreds of issues on a daily basis. Trump wasn't the one who used that equipment and may not even have known they were unstocked, because he was too busy dealing with literally every other more pressing issue at the time, and also being distracted by bogus investigations and impeachment. Obama used that equipment and had eight years to restock it and didn't. After a decade of being understocked, the new administration may have seen the current levels of stock as the norm.

Obama wouldn't have done anything.
>TSA temp checks for all travels
>no media hysteria
>no shutdown, lockdowns

>everybody who dies covid positive wouldn't be listed as a covid death
>no mass testing

we'd probably have around 20k deaths and 200k people who tested positive. there would be no mass hysteria, it'd be swept under the rug. you have all the conspiracy people claiming Obama released a deathly virus and is keeping it quiet. tech companies would be shutting down reports of covid and the media would be attacking people who claim it was more seriously than a bad flu.

people forget that was the democrats/media's talking points about covid initially. don't worry about it, go about your lives. if Obama were president the media would downplay it because there is no way in hell he would want to deal with it. no president running for reelection would risk the economy, especially not Obama.

you can't even compare the two because the media covered for Obama, only gave him glowing press when in reality they were covering for all the corruption of his administration.

Politicizing a virus to this degree and having such a conspiratorial mindset toward governmental action and media is not healthy. I do not want to wear a mask. I do not want to be inside. I understand, through listening to people who have spent their lives studying this, that this is necessary. I do not have 30+ years invested in studying biology and further researching coronaviruses. I do, however, have the ability to appreciate I should perhaps listen to someone who may have a reason to know something that I don't.

Instead of listening to people, we are finding weird infographics about how the smallest particle of covid possible could hypothetically pass through a mask, and thus saying masks are worthless. You are so dumb. Everyone in this country is so dumb. I can't believe how stupid humans have become after the Internet.

Yes, let's assume that Trump did everything right as good as possible. Even Hillary Clinton would've admired him. The attendees at the Womens' March would've doffed their pussy hats. He would've gotten that healing moment and be re-elected with a landslide.

Instead he got no wall and Bannon and that heart string-plucker Kolfage arrested. And how much wall do you get for 25M?

the oval office in Dubya style and froze all travel, no repatriation, no half-ass quarantines, simply if you're an American abroad, you're SOL. At the very least we would have had fewer outbreaks seeded by air travel and plague ships. Instead, being very much a germaphobe, he blew off the briefings he was getting on some new virus until people started dying.

I just had a couple things that mean I was in the White House in 2009-2010 I was working for Vice President Biden I wasn't involved directly in the h1n1 response but I I lived through it as a White House staffer and what I will say about it is a bunch of really talented really great people working on it and we did every possible thing wrong and it's you know 60 million Americans got h1n1 in that period of time and it's just purely a fortuity that this isn't one of the great mass casualty events in American history had nothing to do with I was doing anything right just had to do with luck and so if anyone thinks that this can't happen again yeah I'm to go back to 1918 they just have to go back to 2009-2010 imagine a virus with a different lethality and you can just do the math on that.

Also, anyone who says white people have never been oppressed is a fucking idiot. Fundamentally, telling an entire group of 1.4 billion people they've never faced any oppression is ridiculous. What about trans white people, gay white people, white people with disabilities, victims of childhood sexual assault, women who have been raped, etc. If anyone on the left ever says that, destroy them with facts about white suicide in seconds. If only it was actually as easy as having a certain shade of skin to have dodged the complexities of life. It gives benefits, but it's not freedom from oppression.

I believe a discussions about racial inequality are a bit of a psyop by the left and the right. If we discuss how we are different, instead of how we are the same, and oppressed under the same system, we will not rebel. All of this is a response to occupy wall street.

We live in a country where 5 megaconglomerates control an unprecedented amount of media that we consume. Look into how Whole Foods supports racial diversity within stores specifically to keep people from unionizing, and you'll understand how the wealthy -- who control both the right and the left -- are controlling how we feel. If we are divided, we cannot unite against our common enemy. Wealth gaps will continue to grow, and most of the people on this board will be affected.
